“Weekends are not the same now your gone. I loved when we got together and ate Sunday dinner with my grandkids. Niyah speaks of you often. I remember you would open the door because you could hear her calling your name before she turned the corner to your apartment. The smile on your face to know how much she loved and cherished you made me smile also. I have so many memories of you. So many that would take a life time to share, but I just want people to know you were my "Big Momma", my "Madea", my everything. Now you have taken your place in heaven and left me to continue your legacy. Auntie I miss you so much, but I carry you everyday in my heart! I love you!
