“ I want to start by sending my deepest condolences to Eddie’s family. I am so sorry for your loss. Eddie was truly an amazing person. The day my husband went to jail last year is the day he became friends with Eddie and soon after I met Eddie. As we were coming out Eddie was walking in . A few days after my husband was incarcerated he told me he was friends with his bunky named Eddie who seen me walking out the jail crying while he was going in. I laughed and from that day forward for the rest of the time my husband was in jail he would tell me about food him and bunky made and when I would FaceTime my husband Eddie would always come say hi to me and my baby. Eddie and my husband were inseparable while they were in there together. One time Bunky even convinced my husband to go with him to his class and it ended up being some kind of Muslim class where they had to takeoff their shoes. I remember my husband telling me us laughing about it because he was like I’m never gonna allow you to take me to another class ever again lol because he just kept telling him to go with him and didn’t tell him what the class was and it ended up being some random Muslim class, but they went just to get out of their pod. I hired Eddie on my birthday and that was honestly the best thing I ever did !! Eddie was the best dishwasher I ever had. When he would walk into work he would bring this great energy with him!! Always asking other people if they where okay or what’s wrong if they where upset. He would try to assist other workers with stuff and even made some personal connections with customers . He would interact with tables and take people dishes off he would even get them to go boxes!!! Eddie is definitely an outgoing person !! Everyone at work was so heart broken when we heard he passed away. We all grieved at work for a few days together sharing different memeories and funny times we had with Eddie. Every time I seen Eddie I was also say EDDIE YOU BETTER BE STAYING OUT OF TROUBLE. He would always say you know I am ! I remember one of the last times I seen him . It was a pay day and he came in to get his check . When he came around the corner the first I said was EDDIEEEEEEEEE YOU STAYN OUT OF TROUBLE RIGHT he said yea lol that day he had me laughing so hard because the new gm we had tried piece him about his shoes. He wasn't goin lmfao he was going back and forth with David talking shit and piecin the shit out of him and his teeth. That would be the last time we seen Eddie then the following week we got the news. Not only did we lose an employee but we lost a friend someone close to our hearts. Eddie fly high bro just know all of us here at work miss you!! ☐
