“ As a teenager I was stranded in Lawrence, Mississippi, Joely at the time was attending our grandfather Seaberon Buckley’s funeral, for about a week I got a chance to know & admiral Joe, Joe & our uncle Art dropped me off in Chicago in his Lincoln Mark 8, I loved that car however that moment will & forever be in my mind.

“ My brother! I can visualize us back in school, you in high school, me in elementary with the gate dividing the two schools. I remember when they would come around selling candy and chips to the elementary students. Of course, I never had money to buy any but you would always hand me a few coins for me to get something. I will never forget the way you could make me laugh and how beautiful your voice and laughter were. And, how much you reminded me of our dad. During one of our recent conversations you told me you were ok with the man upstairs. That did my heart good. Brother, I don’t have to worry about you, your health, or your suffering because I know you are at peace now. But my heart misses you and I will always hold tight to that special place in my heart where you exist. We would always end our conversations with me saying “I love you”, and you would have to have the last word and say “I love you more!” Now I can have the last word and tell you “I love you more!” Your sister, Sarah Ellis Dafe
